Number Fourteen

"The Trail of Mystery"

THE copy of the map is blown through a window. The mysterious Spaniard gets it, comes into the saloon and tears up the copy. Betty comes in and says Claire has fled with the original. The Spaniard leaves to find it. Standish turns on Blair and denounces his villainy.

The friends of Sharkey and Blair attack Arthur. The latter, protecting Betty, retreats from the saloon. The crowd of incensed men follow him. Standish takes refuge in a building and meets Claire. He takes the original map from her. Betty gives the map to the Spaniard. Arthur outwits the crowd and he and Betty later meet the Spaniard who asks about the map. Betty says she gave it to him. The Spaniard says she did not, and they realize they have been tricked by an imposter. The real Spaniard flees.

Arthur and Betty take refuge in an abandoned cabin, surrounded by enemies. Standish writes a note on a handkerchief and sends for help. The messenger is his faithful horse. The horse is waylaid. Standish goes to defend him. A rain of bullets greet his efforts. A bullet goes through the open window, upsets a candle and sets the place on fire.

Betty, helpless from a sprained ankle, is caught by the flames. Standish is overpowered and led away by the mob to be hanged. The real Spaniard in his cabin sees the face of the imposter peering in his cabin window.
